The elegant BALUSTER

The humble baluster, originally designed early 15th century to resemble the swelling form of the half open flower, has been popular since Michelangelo used them widely in the 16th century.

Accumen Shapes custom made 195 of these ShapeCrete® one metre high balusters, which had to meet stringent strength tests.

They were then set in place ready for the banister (hand rail) to be installed on top.

Below depicts a section of the completed balustrade (multiple balusters supporting a banister).

The results speak for themselves thanks to the keen eye of the owners and architect. Together with the professional effort of the skilled tradesmen who installed the balusters, a wonderful historical support has been created that will never date.
